USEFUL RECIPES.

CHERRY JELLY. Stems and quantity of the best cherries. To every four pounds of cherries add one pound of the best red currants. Put these fruits into a copper preserving pan. Place over the fire and reduce all to a mush. Keep stirring all the while with a wooden spatula. Now strain, press through a hair sieve and filter through a jelly bag. To each pound of fruit add three-quarters of a pound of sugar. On account of the current you may in this instance increase the sugar to a pound for every three pounds of cherries. Place again on the fire, and boil to a jelly. Remove the scum and fill your glasses or jars. When cold cover the tops with a prepared paper, to keep up and set away for use.

LUCY BEVERAGE. Select the finest and ripest of cherries. Pound them well with the stones in them. The stones are retained because they add to the flavor of the pulp. Press out the juice through a hair sieve, add a little water and give one bowl; now filter through a flannel bag, add a small quantity of syrup, a little lemon juice and a little water. Do not make too sweet. The tendency to all these cordials is to extinguish the sublimity of the fruit in too much sugar. Put into a freezer surrounded by ice, keep this cork as cold as you wish by surrounding it with ice, do not think by putting ice into the beverage itself.

CHERRY COMPOTE. Cut off the stalks of some of the ripest and most highly-flavored cherries. Cut the stalks about half-way up, wash them in cold water, allow it drain until they are entirely dry. If you have some cherry syrup use it. If not, use a little plain sugar syrup in the usual way. Remove the cherries, and add them to the syrup for five or six hours. Remove the scum, if there is any, and allow it to get cold. Now place in a deep glass dish or compote. Take especial care to have the stalks point upward. Now pour in the syrup, add the juice of a lemon.

Stones blackened when entirely cold will keep the cherries in a very great deal longer than when they are polished when the stone is warm. Zine oil can be brightened by rubbing it with kerosene oil, but it is much better to have it polished with a little much labor. After you have swept your carpets quite clean, you may brighten them with a flannel cloth wrung from beer's gall and water. While paint is drying, wash the windows, by using whiting and water, while grained woodwork should be wiped with a flannel cloth wrung out of cold tea. Wash pantry shelves with hot alum and water to rid them of ants, water-bugs and other troublesome insects.

A BLACK PRINCESS. Concerning the Princess Loulouque, the only daughter and the only surviving descendant of the celebrated Emperor of Hayti, who is now visiting in New Haven, a friend of the princess, who resides in New Haven, says: "Our lovely morning, a few years ago, I was seated on the broad balcony of the American minister's house, overlooking the beautiful bay of Port au Prince, in Hayti, when a lady on horseback pulled up in the roadway, and inquired, in a friendly and pleasant manner, whether I would accompany her to the city, a distance of about seven miles, she explained that it was just twelve months since she had actually quitted herself for a tour-back to the city. The lady was the Princess Loulouque, daughter of the Emperor Louverture, who was killed in the battle of the plain of Vertières, from his throne years ago. Her face was of a dark color, but the features were soft, youthful, and a fine set of laughing teeth made her appearance prepossessing. She wore a pretty white tulle dress, with an immense cardinal red feather in her hair, and a small black and white riding dress was of sky-blue silk, with long and trailing in the dust. Around her waist was a broad gold sash, and in her hand she carried a long and straight sword, which she held in her right hand. cent work of the exploration seemed to bring the country before the student of the present day as it appeared to the inhabitants fifteen centuries ago, and confirmed in a most remarkable manner the accuracy of the Bible record. Among the speakers were the Right Hon. A. S. Ayrton, the Bishop of Adelaide and of Nelson, who spoke of the value of the Victoria Philosophical Institute's Transactions, and their great activity for the increase of the number of its members in the colonies, where its Journal, recording the investigations of learned men into the truth as regards the philosophical and scientific questions of the present day, would be even more welcome than in England. Dr. S. J. Bateman, F. R. S., and Mr. D. Howard, Vice-President of the Institute of Chemistry of England, and others.
